System.ArgumentException: "Can not implicitly convert type Model.Bar to System.IServiceProvider." But when I make a request with a constraint type returned I get the following exception.

System.ArgumentException: "Can not implicitly convert type Model.T to Model.IAuditEntity. I understand why the second exception is thrown but I'm still struggling to understand why the first one is thrown. A: The problem is not with the type resolution, but with the fact that your Web API uses generic constraints to define the generic type, when the generic constraints are applied at the call-site. Consider these two classes: public class Owner { public string Id { get; set; } public IList Items { get; set; } } public class Owner2 : Owner { } And the client API: public IQueryable Get(string id) where T : Bar, IAuditEntity { var owner = new Owner { Id = id, Items = new List { new Bar() } }; return new Owner2.Items; } This code will fail at runtime if the generic constraint is not satisfied, because you can't create a 04aeff104c
